Akwaaba MHPS!

(Akwaaba means hello in local Ghanaian dialect)

I am thrilled to say this is the first of my new monthly news blog to you. You can expect one of these treats each and every month on here, for the whole school year!

So Muswell Hill, what should you expect from my blog? I hope to provide each of you with a good serving of inspiration and a little insight into Ghana's people and its stunning sights. Most importantly, my greatest aim is to warm your hearts and create some smiles by helping you to feel connected with the children of Haasto Primary School.

Each month I will provide a mixture of writing, photos and videos all about Haasto Primary School. I will provide an insight into how the money that we raised is being carefully and thoughtfully spent.

I have given all the beautifully written letters out; each of your letters has been received by incredibly happy, excited, smiley Ghanaian children. Their faces resembled those of Christmas morning smiles. Each and every one of you has now officially been matched to a Ghanaian child! The pen pal exchange is now in action. Please see photos and videos in the PowerPoint that is available on the school website.

I hope to bring back all the wonderful replies to your lovely letters in December.

Keep well, keep happy,

Emma Hegazy
